

Issue 13 25th June 2008—Tony Keys

Tulloch 'Private Bin JK Walker' Shiraz 2006:

Here's a quandary, the reason wineries send wine to people like me is to get a third party endorsement with the hope that increased sales will result. But the problem is, if I give this a good review and people do go out and buy it, then the law of commercial reality will come into play and it will go up in price. I could say a great deal about this wine - drivel on for hours. Let's just leave it at 'I think this is a very fine wine indeed' and note the mark.

96 points / this is unbelievable value at $40. Put it in a global context and it's incredibly cheap